George Clemens, Economist

Georg Clemens works as an economist in the Brussels and Düsseldorf offices of Compass Lexecon’s European Competition Practice.

As part of his more than three years of experience as a competitive economist, he has worked for Deutsche Börse/London Stock Exchange Exchange, EDF/Areva and Halliburton-ton/Baker Hughes on the EU merger process. In addition, he has been involved in a number of German antitrust lawsuits and European marketplace abuse proceedings.

Georg Clemens is a PhD graduate in Economics (DICE, Heinrich-Heine-University of Düsseldorf) and studied Economics and Law at the University of Bonn. His research focus is in the area of ”Big Data” and leniency in cartel law.

Compass Lexecon

Compass Lexecon is a leading global competitive consulting company. It offers economic advice on a wide range of topics in antitrust and regulatory investigations and court proceedings, strategic decision-making in companies and in the economic policy debate. The European team includes more than 100 economists with offices in Berlin, Brussels, Düsseldorf, Helsinki, London, Madrid and Paris.

Conglomerate mergers and the portfolio effect

The lecture addresses the merger of Trelleborg AB and CGS Holding, which was approved by the EU Commission in May 2016. The lecture will explain to what degree economic concepts can be incorporated into the analysis of a company merger and whether they can actively influence the outcome of the merger. Students of Economics will understand the practical relevance of the methods learned at the University of Bonn. In addition, the presented approaches will be critically discussed with the students.

WIWI konkret:

October 25, 2017, 18 s.t. – 19:30 p.m.
Juridicum / Lecture Hall F

Georg Clemens, Economist, Compass Lexecon:

“Conglomerate mergers and the portfolio effect: The case of Trelleborg AB / ČGS Holding”